JOHN A. SHIELDS HEADS CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

The Rev. W. E. Carroll is Elected Vice-President and Adolph Steinwedel Treasurer.

CLARK B. DAVIS SECRETARY

Ten Directors Also Named By Members at Annual Meeting at Central Christian Church.

EDWIN L. QUARLES SPEAKS

In Forceful Address He Tells How Organization Can Help The Community—Other Talks Made.

John A. Shields, secretary of the Blish Milling Company, was elected president of the Seymour chamber of commerce at the annual business meeting which was held Tuesday night at the Central Christian church. He succeeds William C. Young, who last April at the urgent request of the board of directors consented to serve as head of the organization until the time of the annual meeting. The Rev. W. E. Carroll, pastor of the Central Christian church, was elected vice-president and Clark B. Davis and Adolph Steinwedel were re-elected secretary and treasurer, respectively. Ten directors were chosen as follows: Albert H. Ahlbrand, E. F. Maxon, Frank J. Voss, Claude Carter, Edward Massman, Clifford Jackson, C. D. Billings, Ray R. Keach, Charles L. Kessler and Mr. Young.

One of the interesting features of the meeting was an address by Edwin L. Quarles, field secretary of the state chamber of commerce, who spoke of the value of a chamber of commerce to a community and the most effective plan of organization. Other addresses were made by E. P. Elsnor, John M. Lewis and L. C. Griffiths.

During the evening the ladies of the Christian church served a two course luncheon which was much enjoyed and highly praised. The president, upon behalf of the Chamber, extended to the ladies of the church an expression of appreciation for their part in making the meeting a success. During the meal selections were furnished by Brinklow's orchestra.

Mr. Quarles presented some highly valuable ideas in his splendid address which are applicable to the local organization. "A chamber of commerce is an organization of the citizens of a community whose purpose it is to do the business of the community which is nobody's else business to do," he said in defining the term. "One of our greatest weaknesses which has become a national malady is that the ordinary business man does not think in terms of organization for community betterment," he said. "It is the duty of the chamber of commerce to teach men to think straight for community business and for national betterment."

Mr. Quarles said that approximately $10,000,000 is being paid annually in the United States for the promotion of chamber of commerce work and that there are about 2,500 comparatively active commercial bodies in this country. He said it is the duty of these organizations to teach men to think straight. If this idea could be inculcated in the minds of both labor and capital, he said great progress would be made towards the final settlement of the present day economic problems. He spoke of the

HOOVER EXPECTS DROP IN PRICES

Regulation Has Reached Limit of Control He Declares in an Interview.

FOREIGN WAREHOUSES FILLED

Government Must Aid Producers in Finding Markets or Reaction is Inevitable.

By United Press

Paris, September 3—A tremendous drop in food prices in the United States may be expected in the next few months, Herbert Hoover indicated today. The speculators have reached the end of their powers Hoover declared, and are no longer able to maintain corners in stock owning in Europe's inability to purchase overstock.

"Warehouses in Amsterdam, Copenhagen and Stockholm, are full of foodstuffs from America," he said, but no outlet exists as the countries needing food are unable to pay the high prices. "Speculation during the world war is responsible for the present high prices," he said. The American government must intervene as well as by fixing maximum and minimum prices in the United States.

"An extremely dangerous situation will result in case the United States government will not assist producers in finding outlets for their products. Unless there are permanent markets for the product a terrible reaction is inevitable."

"An extremely dangerous situation will result in case the United States government does not assist producers in finding outlets for their goods. During the war American products of all kinds increased three-fold. Unless there are permanent markets for these products a terrible reaction is inevitable, counteracting all the production incentives which caused the present efficiency."

"American farmers are entitled to the greatest consideration. After government stimulation, their production must be guaranteed markets."

Speaking of the general European situation, Hoover said:

"Belgium is in the best condition industrially. Agricultural production in all the European nations is nearing a normal state, but the countries which have emerged from the war will need American financial assistance for another 18 months."

"Bolshevism is permanently headed off in Western Europe. I believe one of the most effective weapons used against the menace was the relief of the American food administration. Committees composed of the better classes, took care of the children of the poor, thereby breaking up class antagonisms."

CLAIMS AVIATOR WAS OVER BORDER

General Garza Files Statement Concerning Shooting of Capt. David W. McNabb.

SOLDIERS ADMIT SHOOTING

Witnesses Declare American Flier Was North of The International Boundary.

By United Press

Laredo, Sept. 3—Capt. David W. McNabb was one kilometer across the border flying over Mexican territory when shot yesterday by Mexican soldiers, General Garza, commander of the Carranza garrison at Nuevo Laredo declared today.

General Garza in a statement made public through the Mexican consul in Laredo admitted the shooting was done by soldiers at a Carranza outpost.

General Garza's statement declares that immediately after learning of the incident the general proceeded to the spot where the shooting occurred. The soldiers at the outpost admitted the shooting, declaring the aviators were over Mexican soil. The commander of the outpost was absent at the time.

The soldiers, said, according to Garza's statement, that they had received many complaints of aviators flying over Mexican soil, but these protests had been repeatedly ignored. He said the aviators had been taking photographs of Mexican territory.

B. J. Leyenbecker, county tax assessor, who was on his farm sixteen miles northwest of Laredo when Capt. McNabb and Lieutenant Johnson, his pilot, landed there after the shooting, told the United Press here today he could furnish evidence by numerous witnesses that the Americans were not on the Mexican side of the border. Leyenbecker said many persons on his farm saw the airplane flying at a low altitude towards the Rio Grande when the Mexicans opened fire. He said these witnesses declared the Mexicans fired scores of shots from the Mexican side of the Rio Grande and that the plane swerved immediately and started for the ranch house.

Capt. McNabb was resting easily today and it was declared the bullet wound in his head is not serious. His home is in Bedford Indiana.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

The Seymour chamber of commerce has closed its first fiscal year and is entering upon its second under conditions that are most propitious. A splendid spirit was manifested at the annual business meeting last night and the atmosphere was pervaded with a determination to make the organization even a greater success in the future. The first year is ended with a splendid record of achievements. Ideas which have been advanced during the year will become a realization and take material form during the coming twelve months.

The chamber of commerce is fortunate in its selection of officers and directors. Mr. John A. Shields has not been a resident of this city long, but has made a reputation as an untiring worker, aggressive, energetic and successful. He is admirably qualified for the presidency of the organization. He has executive ability and is a leader. At the same time he appreciates the full worth of co-operation without which the Chamber cannot succeed. The Rev. W. E. Carroll has had experience in commercial body work. He, too, is a new man in this city, but he brings new ideas which will be of great value to the local organization. Mr. Clark B. Davis, the secretary, and Mr. Adolph Steinwedel, the treasurer, served last year in the same positions and their re-election is in recognition of their splendid services. The directorate is composed of business men of prime judgment who are personally interested in the future well being of Seymour and are anxious to contribute to the city's advancement.

The progress made by the organization the last year was due in a large measure to the activities of the officers and directors together with the co-operation of membership. The efforts of the officers avail nothing if the members do not aid and support them. The organization is composed of individuals, all working for the same purposes and the activities are limited only by the extent of the service rendered by the members and their desire to serve when and where needed. Every member cannot be the president or a director, yet the duty and responsibility of each member is just as important as that of any officer or director.

The future is filled with great possibilities for the development of Seymour. The bigger idea of community service is found and there is a willingness to serve. The place of the chamber of commerce is fully recognized. The field of activity is not limited. Cooperation will make the second year even more successful than the first.

The annual reunion of the Yelton-Bryan families was held Monday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Clark south of Franklin. MAY FAMILY REUNION.

The twenty-sixth annual reunion of the May family was held Saturday in the social hall of the Presbyterian church at Seipio and was attended by eighty-seven relatives, many of them from a distance, and who have not been present at previous reunions. A bountiful dinner was spread at two long tables in the basement of the church to which all did justice. The afternoon was spent in a social way and at the business session all the old officers were re-elected for another year. Letters were read from several relatives, and a number of deaths and marriages were reported for the year. Double Butter Fat

All the Van Camp condenseries are surrounded by sanitary dairies filled with high-bred cows.

The fresh milk is brought in and placed in a vacuum. There, by low heat, more than half the water is evaporated.

Then we have a milk as thick as thick cream—twice as rich as it came from the cow.

If you want a rich cream for coffee, cereals, or ice cream, you can use Van Camp's as it is. If you want rich milk, dilute it with an equal part of water. For cooking, dilute it further.

Cheaper—Richer —Safer

Van Camp's costs less than bottled milk. It is vastly cheaper, because it saves all waste.

Keep small cans and large cans on the pantry shelf. Open what you wish.

Thus you have milk or cream for any purpose. Never a shortage, never a waste.

You have a sterilized milk—the only safe sort for infants or for drinking.

You have for your cooking a full-cream milk, instead of the usual skimmed milk.

From Four Feet to Four Wheels

THE retail merchant's sphere of usefulness is sharply defined by his ability to make prompt delivery.

In the days before motor trucks came into general use, his progress was measured, not by his vision, initiative or merchandizing ability, but by the speed and endurance of horse flesh.

With the automobile and truck came a constantly widening field of activity—quicker deliveries were possible. A widened service meant more and better satisfied customers and the merchant was able to expand his business to the utmost.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has been an important factor in making this expansion possible. By anticipating the demands for gasoline and lubricating oil, it was prepared to supply these necessary products to merchants, even in remote places.

Further, the very feature of wide distribution and low price of gasoline has enabled the small merchant to utilize power-driven delivery.

Thus has the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) been an important factor in the expansion of business by helping the little merchant to become big, and the people in remote corners to have the advantages of cities.

How well the Company has functioned may be judged by its size, for no concern could have reached the proportions of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) without rendering an important and definite service to the public.

WORK OF REMODELING HOTEL WILL BE PUSHED RAPIDLY

Making Plans to Take Care of Traveling Public While Remodeling is in Progress.

L. R. Fosgate, who purchased the New Lynn Hotel building Tuesday and is preparing to turn it into one of the most modern and up-to-date hosteries in the state, stated today that the work will be pushed as rapidly as possible. The contract for the work will be let in a few days. The building was purchased from Mrs. Lynn Dobbins.

The hotel proprietor stated this morning that the progress of the work will be somewhat handicapped owing to the necessity of taking care of the traveling public. Mr. Fosgate plans to have a part of the work done at a time so that it will not be necessary to close the entire building while the improvements are in progress.

Persimmon Brigade Meets.

By United Press.

Indianapolis, September 3—For thirty-four years the Persimmon Brigade of Civil War fame has met, recalled old times and adjourned. Today its members met again in probably the last meeting. The ranks have been thinned by death and those still living are becoming too feeble from the ravages of time to journey to meetings.

The brigade consists of the 115th, 116th and 118th Indiana Volunteer Infantry companies, who brought fame to Hoosierdom during '65.

See Their Uniform Mileage Through Your Meter's Eye

That Long-Distance Service Every Miller Gives

We pay our respects to the motor car's meter—it is proving that, tire after tire, Miller casings, under like conditions, wear alike. That, tire after tire, they are long-distance runners.

This Miller feat of producing Uniform Tires is much discussed. Of course it requires the choicest rubber and fabric. But more than that, the workers must be trained to build alike.

That is what the Miller factory has accomplished. And that is why we feature Miller Tires. By giving you exceptional mileage, we know we can earn your trade.

Reasonable prices, fair charges and quick service go with everything we sell.

CROWDS ARE GROWING AT INDIANA STATE FAIR

Special Attractions in Full Swing—Races Draw Many Spectators.

By United Press
Indianapolis, Sept. 3—The growing crowds at the State Fair today indicated the increasing interest in the exposition out in the state, and with favorable weather the management is expecting its old attendance record to be broken. All the wheels were turning in the fair's machinery department today. The bands were playing and the full program of special attractions was under way. In the show rings Belgian horses, Shorthorn and Hereford beef cattle and Guernseys in the dairy breed were features in the contests for blue ribbons, while Poland China and Hampshires were shown in the swine contests. The attention of the crowd was concentrated on the poultry show, while the fine arts in the new women's building and the automobile show in the new manufacturers' building drew thousands of sight seers.

The distinctive feature of the day was to be the pacing race this afternoon between Single G. (1:59 1-4) and Miss Harris M. (1:58 1-4) in a three heat contest for a special purse of $4,000. These pacers are both owned in Indiana and are the fastest pacers in the world. With track conditions favorable it was expected that the record of the Indiana course would be broken, while a new record mark for pacers was anticipated.

Another feature was educational lectures for exhibitors in the fine arts department, made by the judges of pictures, needlework, decorated china and similar displays, in which the judges explained why ribbons had been tied on some exhibits and why other exhibitors failed to win. The purpose of the lectures was to help exhibitors improve their craftsmanship products which are shown at the Indiana fair in future years. The lectures were held in the auditorium of the women's building.

WILSON TO START LONG TRIP TODAY

President Will Attempt to Solidify
Sentiment in Favor of League of Nations.

IN INDIANAPOLIS TOMORROW

Will Argue That Economic Unrest Cannot End Until Treaty is Accepted.

By United Press

Washington, September 3—President Wilson leaves Washington this evening on a 10,000 mile speaking tour through the states in an effort to convince the people that the treaty should be ratified.

He will attempt to solidify opinion in favor of the treaty.

In this endeavor to create an irresistible demand for ratification of the president, it was learned will make bald statements.

His itinerary calls for invasion of the states of some of the strongest opponents in the senate.

One of his arguments is expected to be that the industrial unrest and high prices cannot end until peace is accepted through the treaty.

Indications today were that president Wilson will depart with the treaty still in the hands of the committee. One of the chief reasons for this, members said today, is the quandary some members are in over Senator Fall's amendment to strike out the labor section.

In view of Samuel Gompers' statement that this section was written by labor men for labor and denying Fall's claims that it will lower American labor standards, some committee members feel that if they support Fall's amendment they will give President Wilson a powerful weapon against them which he would use effectively on his trip in speaking to the countries workers. On the other hand, the opposition to the section has not been killed by Gompers' statement.

If the statement is perplexed by this, the anti-treaty members feel they have the treaty's supporters in a corner on the Johnson amendment to equalize the United States vote in the league of nations assembly with those of Great Britain. Treaty opponents believe public opinion can be cultivated to prevent senators voting to give Great Britain more votes than America. They profess to see in this possibility one of their strongest weapons.

school corporations find it necessary to apply for state aid. A salary of $5.00 per day will be approved where a regular high school teacher is required to teach special subjects in the grades; e. g., agriculture, manual training, domestic science, music and art.

The attorney general has construed section I, page 66, Acts of 1919 to mean that a township trustee does not have the right, in his discretion, to transport or pay for the transportation of high school pupils.

The attorney general has issued the following opinion and the state board of accounts and field examiners of said board will be duty bound to follow said opinion and will therefore be directed and instructed to charge each public school official in Indiana with the amount or amounts of money they pay public school teachers in violation of the provisions of said opinion, commencing with the opening of our public schools in Sept. 1919:

"That it is unlawful for a trustee or school board to employ any person wearing the religious uniform of any organization to which they belong, as teacher in public schools and pay them out of public school revenues."

The state board of education has sent out the following relative to junior high schools: As a basis for determining whether or not a school conforms to the requirements of a junior high school, and before the provisions of the junior high school law may be held to apply, any school which establishes one of the foregoing types of junior high school or intermediate school shall have its course of study and teaching staff approved in advance by the state board of education. Therefore there will be no junior high school in Indiana, so far as classification by the state board of education is concerned, until approval can be made of the course of study and the teaching staff of the school. Blanks will be furnished by the department for the reports on those and other items.

Many questions arise concerning junior high school licenses. The state board has decided that teachers with the required training who hold common school licenses may be hired to teach in grades seven and eight on these licenses, but that all such teachers must necessarily hold junior high school licenses before the school can be approved and recognized as a junior high school by the state department of education.

Any teacher who holds a common school license and makes additional license in high school English and high school science of education will be eligible for approval in this respect by the state board of education. For this reason it is advisable that all teachers who teach in junior high schools which will ask for proper recognition, take examination in these additional subjects and hold licenses in same; or a better procedure would be for the teachers to write for new junior high school licenses in the subjects they teach, together with junior high school English and high school science.

If a junior high school license is made as late as January there will be ample time to have schools approved as Junior high schools by the state board of education.

danger of bolshevism and other creeds which are sweeping through the country and called upon the citizenry of the nation to awaken to the necessity of protecting American institutions which give liberty and freedom unknown in other parts of the world. "It is our duty to prevent these poison fumes from arising from our own home fires to mar the horizon for America, if we are to become the storehouse, the bank and the hospital of the world.

"The chamber of commerce is the touchpoint by which Seymour may come in contact with the outside world," he said. It is the organization that looks after the welfare of the city and the community and protects the public in a way that it could not be safeguarded if the organization were not in existence.

Speaking of the modern plan on which a chamber of commerce may be successfully conducted, he advocated the employment of a paid secretary who would give all of his time to the work of the organization. He advocated the appointment of four or five committees to have charge of such departments as industry, commerce, agriculture and civics and then effect an organization around these as the key stones. There are three necessary elements in the modern plan—men, money and the plan. He said the plan separates the men from the money, if the plan is sold to the business men in the same way that goods or other merchandise are sold to them.

The paid secretary was advocated as no organization can become effective in the highest degree without a leader. He thought that from $7,000 to $10,000 annually would be needed to maintain a live, wide awake chamber of commerce in this city. The three year plan for financing the organization was advocated by Mr. Quarles as the secretary can then map out his program in advance without the anxiety of annual financial campaigns.

Mr. Quarles emphasized that the chamber of commerce must do more than look after the business and industrial development of a community that it must assist the schools and must teach the duties of citizenship. "Conversion to the religion of citizenship" is one of the biggest duties of the organization, he declared.

Mr. Lewis spoke on behalf of the city, congratulating the members and the officers for their successful efforts during the last year. He pointed out the necessity for a wide awake chamber of commerce in this city that the future progress and development may be properly safeguarded.

Mr. Elsner referred to the good roads projects in Jackson county and the results which have been obtained through activity of the roads committee of the organization. He called upon the members to give more attention to the duties of citizenship and urged each voter to "become a politician" and to take an active part in the management and control of public affairs.

Mr. Griffiths, who is president of the Seymour Rotary club, explained that some citizens had an erroneous idea of the purpose of the Rotarian movement. He said that the Rotary club was organized for the purpose of assisting the chamber of commerce and that the members were always ready to do what they could for the advancement of the city. The elimination of selfishness in every endeavor in life is one of the main objects of the Rotary club, he said, and that it is the Rotary belief that communities cannot advance so long as selfishness exists. The Rotarians

Big Lot of Hay Fever Jokes

But Kentucky Man Says—"People Who Belong to Hay Fever Colony are Kidding Themselves."

Wouldn't Be Any Rose or Hay Fever if Simple Home Remedy Was Given a Chance.

"Yes, there's a real NINTY-NINE per cent effective remedy for hay or rose fever," frankly states a druggist in a prosperous Kentucky city.

"But I don't expect anyone to believe me, because the treatment is so easy and the cost not worth mentioning."

"The annual crop of hay-fever jokes would be mighty scarce if people would get an ounce of Mentholized Arcline and by just adding water that has been boiled make a pint of liquid that will prove a real help to all who suffer."

"Many of my hay-fever friends tell me that by starting to gargle and sniff or spray the nostrils a few times a day the expected severe attack often fails to appear and in cases where it does show up is very mild and does not annoy."

"The Better Class of Pharmacists" who dispense Mentholized Arcline say it will greatly modify any attack even when taken three or four days after hostilities begin.

Go to a real live druggist when you get ready to make a pint.

7 A DAY FOR 7 DAYS

If Your Nerves Are Shaky Because of Over-Indulgence in Tobacco or Alcohol or by Excess of Any Kind, Bio-Feren Is What You Need Right Away.

You can have nerves of steel, firm step, new courage and keep mind by putting your blood and nerves in first-class shape with mighty Bio-Feren, a new discovery, inexpensive and efficient.

Men and women who get up so tired in the morning that they have to drag themselves to their daily labor will in just a few days arise with clear mind, definite purpose and loads of ambition.

All you have to do is to take two Bio-Feren tablets after each meal and one at bedtime—7 a day for 7 days—then reduce to one after each meal until all are gone.

Then if your energy and endurance haven't doubled, if your mind isn't keener and eyes brighter, if you don't feel twice as ambitious as before, any druggist anywhere will return the purchase price—gladly and freely.

Bio-Feren is without doubt, the grandest remedy for nervous, rundown, weak, anemic men and women ever offered and is not at all expensive. All druggists in this city and vicinity have a supply on hand—sell many packages.

The Magnificent Ambersons

BY BOOTH TARKINGTON

Copyright by Doubleday, Page & Company.

But this frightened him horribly—that she seemed so glad she could feel it, like a child proud of some miraculous seeming thing accomplished. It frightened him so that he could not speak, and he feared that she would know how he trembled; but she was unaware, and again was silent. Finally she spoke again:

"I wonder if—if Eugene and Lucy know that we've come—home."
"I'm sure they do."
"Has he—asked about me?"
"Yes, he was here."
"Has he—gone?"
"Yes, mother."
She sighed faintly. "I'd like—"
"What, mother?"

"I'd like to have—seen him." It was audible, this little regretful murmur. Several minutes passed before there was another. "Just—just once," she whispered, and then was still.

She seemed to have fallen asleep, and George moved to go, but a faint pressure upon his fingers detained him, and he remained, with her hand still pressed against his cheek. After a while he made sure she was asleep, and moved again, to let the nurse come in, and this time there was no pressure of the fingers to keep him. She was not asleep, but, thinking that if he went he might get some rest, and be better prepared for what she knew was coming, she commanded those longing fingers of hers—and let him go.

He found the doctor standing with the nurse in the hall; and, telling them that his mother was drowsing now, George went back to his own room, where he was startled to find his grandfather lying on the bed, and his uncle leaning against the wall. They had gone home two hours before, and he did not know they had returned.

"The doctor thought we'd better come over," Amberson said, then was silent, and George, shaking violently, sat down on the edge of the bed. His shaking continued, and from time to time he wiped heavy sweat from his forehead.

The hours passed, and sometimes the old man upon the bed would snore a little, stop suddenly, and move as if to rise, but George Amberson would set a hand upon his shoulder, and murmur a reassuring word or two. Once George gasped defiantly: "That doctor in New York said she might get better! Don't you know he did? Don't you know he said she might?"

Amberson made no answer. Dawn had been murkling through the smoky windows, growing stronger for half an hour, when both men started violently at a sound in the hall; and the Major sat up on the bed. It was the voice of the nurse speaking to Fanny Minafer, and the next moment Fanny appeared in the doorway making contorted efforts to speak.

Amberson said weakly: "Does she want us—to come in?"
But Fanny found her voice, and uttered a long, loud cry. She threw her arms about George, and sobbed in an agony of loss and compassion:
"She loved you!" she wailed. "She loved you! She loved you! Oh, how she did love you!"

Major Amberson remained dry-eyed through the time that followed; he knew that this separation from his daughter would be short; that the separation which had preceded it was the long one. He worked at his ledgers no more under his old gas drop-light, but would sit all evening staring into the fire, in his bedroom, and not speaking unless someone asked him a question. He seemed almost unaware of what went on around him, and those who were with him thought him dazed by Isabel's death, guessing that he was lost in reminiscences and vague dreams. "Probably his mind is full of pictures of his youth, or the Civil war, and the days when he and mother were young married people and all of us children were jolly little things—and the city was a small town with one cobbled street and the others just dirt roads with board sidewalks." This was George Amberson's conjecture, and the others agreed; but they were mistaken. The Major was engaged in the profoundest thinking of his life. No business plans which had ever absorbed him could compare in momentousness with the plans that absorbed him now, for he had to plan how to enter the unknown country where he was not even sure of being recognized as an Amberson—not sure of anything, except that Isabel would help him if she could. The Major was occupied with the first really important matter that had taken his attention since he came home invalided, after the Gettysburg campaign, and went into business, and he realized that everything which had worried him or delighted him during this lifetime between then and today—all his buying and building and trading and banking—that it all was trifling and waste beside what concerned him now.

Meanwhile, the life of the little bereft group still forlornly centering upon him began to pick up again, as life will, and to emerge from its own period of dazedness. It was not Isabel's father but her son who was really dazed.

A month after her death he walked abruptly into Fanny's room, one night, and found her at her desk, eagerly adding columns of figures with which she had covered several sheets of paper.

"George! You startled me."
"I beg your pardon for not knocking," he said huskily. "I didn't think." She turned in her chair and looked at him solicitously. "Sit down, George, won't you?"
"No, I just wanted—"

"I could hear you walking up and down in your room," said Fanny. "You were doing it ever since dinner, and it seems to me you're at it almost every evening. I don't believe it's good for you—and I know it would worry your mother terribly if she—"

Fanny hesitated.
"See here," George said, breathing fast, "I want to tell you once more that what I did was right. How could I have done anything else but what I did do?"
"Oh, I don't pretend to judge," Fanny said soothingly, for his voice and gesture both partook of wildness. "I know you think you did, George."

"Think I did?" he echoed violently. "My God in heaven!" And he began to walk up and down the floor. "What else was there to do? What choice did I have? Was there any other way of stopping the talk?" He stopped, close in front of her, gesticulating, his voice harsh and loud: "Was there any other way on earth of protecting her from the talk?"

Miss Fanny looked away. "It died down before long, I think," she said nervously.

"I Did the Right Thing, I Tell You."

"That shows I was right, doesn't it?" he cried. "If I hadn't acted as I did, that slanderous old Johnson woman would have kept on with her slanders—she'd still be—"

"No," Fanny interrupted. "She's dead. She dropped dead with apoplexy one day about six weeks after you left. I didn't mention it in my letters because I didn't want—I thought—"

"Well, the other people would have kept on, then. They'd have—"

"I don't know," said Fanny, still averting her troubled eyes. "Things are so changed here, George. The other people you speak of—one hardly knows what's become of them. Of course not a great many were doing the talking, and they—well, some of them are dead, and some might as well be—you never see them any more—and the rest, whoever they were, are probably so mixed in with the crowds of new people that seem never even to have heard of us—and I'm sure we certainly never heard of them—and people seem to forget things so soon—they seem to forget anything. You can't imagine how things have changed here!"

George gulped painfully before he could speak. "You—you mean to sit there and tell me that if I'd just let things go on— Oh!" He swung away, walking the floor again. "I tell you I did the only right thing! You think I was wrong!"

"I'm not saying so," she said. "You did at the time!" he cried. "You said enough then, I think. Well, what have you to say now, if you're so sure I was wrong?"
"Nothing, George."

"It's only because you're afraid to!" he said, and he went on with a sudden bitter divination: "You're reproaching yourself with what you had to do with all that; and you're trying to make up for it by doing and saying what you think mother would want you to, and you think I couldn't stand it if I got to thinking I might have done differently. Oh, I know! That's exactly what's in your mind: you do think I was wrong! So does Uncle George. I challenged him about it the other day, and he answered just as you're answering—evaded, and tried to be gentle! I don't care to be handled with gloves! I tell you I was right, and I don't need any coddling by people that think I wasn't! And I suppose you believe I was wrong not to let Morgan see her that last night when he came here, and she—she was dying. If you do, why in the name of God did you come and ask me? You could have taken him in! She did want to see him. She—"

Miss Fanny looked startled. "You think—"

"She told me so!" And the tortured young man choked. "She said—'just once.' She said 'I'd like to have seen him—just once.' She meant—to tell him good-bye! That's what she meant! And you put this on me, too; you put this responsibility on me! But I tell you, and I told Uncle George, that the responsibility isn't all mine! If you were so sure I was wrong all the time—when I took her away, and when I turned Morgan out—if you were so sure, what did you let me do it for? You and Uncle George were grown people, both of you, weren't you? You were older than I, and if you were so sure you were wiser than I, why did you just stand around with your hands hanging down, and let me go ahead? You could have stopped it if it was wrong, couldn't you?"

Fanny shook her head. "No, George," she said slowly. "Nobody could have stopped you. You were too strong, and—"

"And what?" he demanded loudly. "And she loved you—too well."

George stared at her hard, then his lower lip began to move convulsively, and he set his teeth upon it but could not check its frantic twitching.

He ran out of the room.

She sat still, listening. He had plunged into his mother's room, but no sound came to Fanny's ears after the sharp closing of the door; and presently she rose and stepped out into the hall—but could hear nothing. What interview was sealed away from human eye and ear within the lonely darkness on the other side of that door—in that darkness where Isabel's own special chairs were, and her own special books, and the two great walnut wardrobes filled with her dresses and wraps? What tragic argument might be there vainly striving to confute the gentle dead? "In God's name, what else could I have done?" For his mother's immutable silence was surely answering him as Isabel in life would never have answered him, and he was beginning to understand how eloquent the dead can be. They cannot stop their eloquence, no matter how they have loved the living; they cannot choose. And so, no matter in what agony George should cry out, "What else could I have done?" and to the end of his life no matter how often he made that wild appeal, Isabel was doomed to answer him with the wistful, faint murmur.

"I'd like to have—seen him. Just once."

JACK PICKFORD IN A DRAMA OF KENTUCKY HILLS

One of the most remarkable collections of mountain "types" ever seen on the screen appear in "Bill Apperson's Boy," to be shown at the Princess Theatre Today. The men, bearded and armed with the inevitable gun and the women, slatternly and followed by crowds of children who roam the hills like small, wild creatures, forms a background before which the leading actors appear. Jack Pickford is the star. He is supported by Gloria Hope, Russell Simpson and others.
